

"Workshop: Scholarly Writing" by Natalie Reid, USA

Workshop Part 1:
Tuesday, May 16, to Friday, May 19, 2017

Workshop Part 2:
Tuesday, October 24, to Friday, October 27, 2017

University of Zurich, 2017

Writing in English is different from writing in any European language. An English academic paper must be sufficiently clear, concise, focused, and stylistically appropriate for an international publication to accept it. Nathalie Reid will individually consult the workshop participants on their papers applying the right analytical, contextual, structural, and stylistic writing tools for competing with native speakers. Workshop participants will get input in every stage of the writing process, including outlining for clear argumentation, building strong sentences, organizing information effectively, focusing content appropriately, and framing everything from the paragraph through the paper itself.

Workshop structure

- Prerequisite

- Students must have a paper that they consider to be ready for submission.
- Full knowledge of the book "Getting Published in International Journals" by Natalie Reid 2010 (Oslo: NOVA; Norwegian Social Research). Students have to take a written entrance test on April 10, 2017, to make sure that they meet the requirements.
- Revise your paper: After course acceptance but before the course starts, participants are required to revise their existing paper according to the writing rules and guidelines in the book. Submission deadline for the revised paper is May 10, 2017, at the latest (papers must be sent to curdin.pfister@business.uzh.ch).

- Workshop – Part 1

For the first part of the workshop Natalie Reid will be at the University of Zurich in a time window from Tuesday, May 16 to Friday, May 19, 2017. The focus of the first workshop is on the individual consultation of the participants' papers. After the workshop, students work through all the recommendations and thoroughly revise their paper until the second workshop.

- Workshop – Part 2

For the second part of the workshop Natalie Reid will be at the University of Zurich in a time window from Tuesday, October 24, to Friday, October 27, 2017. Participants discuss their revised papers as recommended in the first part of the workshop. Revised versions of the paper have to be handed in by Wednesday, October 18, 2017.

Target Participants: All Ph.D. students and researchers whose professional goals include publishing articles in English in international high-ranking journals in their area of expertise.

Workshop Lecturer: Natalie Reid has been teaching English writing skills in Europe, Japan, the Pacific, and the US for over 20 years. Since the early 2000s she has been teaching academic writing to, consulting with, and editing papers for European social scientists and other professionals.

Application: Given the structure of the workshop, the number of participants is limited. Applications should include a short CV and a current, advanced version of the working paper on which you want to work during the workshop. Please send your application to Curdin Pfister (curdin.pfister@business.uzh.ch) by February 26, 2017.
