Professional Development Workshop
Publishing in Academic Journals

9th March 2016
University of Zurich, Switzerland

A full-day event sponsored by the Journal of Management Studies and the University of Zurich.

Publishing in high-profile, high-impact, academic journals has become increasingly challenging. Despite the conventions about what constitutes a strong/valid theoretical contribution, publishing academic research inevitably takes the shape of a craft that authors (as well as editors and reviewers alike) frequently (and quite often painfully) learn by doing.

As part of its mission to support the development of doctoral students and junior faculty, the Journal of Management Studies will hold a PDW to help researchers improve their understanding of the expectations of editorial teams at top journals. Led by JMS editors, the workshop will focus on such topics as publishing, writing for impact, reviewing, and managing academic careers.

The event will take place at the University of Zurich on 9th March 2016. It will convey editors' perspectives on publishing in top management journals and feature examples of papers that have been through the editorial process.

The workshop will be a full day (from 8:30 am to 6pm), attendance is free of charge, and meals will be provided. To ensure effective interaction, the workshop will be limited to 30 participants.

The workshop will be led by:
Gerardo Patriotta, University of Nottingham
Penny Dick, Sheffield University
David Seidl, University of Zurich

We are excited about this new initiative and we look forward to sharing with you our editorial experience on academic writing and reviewing.
