PERSONALquarterly Best Paper Award
for Young Scientists

The PERSONALquarterly is a (german language) journal which has the key aim to present the results from high quality academic research to professionals in HR departments.

The PERSONALquarterly is a new concept based on Germany's oldest journal for HR management. Its main goal is to bridge the gap between insights from academic research and practitioners' needs and questions and to advance the field of Evidence-based HR management.

In order to reward high quality academic research which is useful to inform practical HR management PERSONALquarterly now has donated the PQ Best Paper Award. Aim of the award is to reward high quality academic research that leads to particularly interesting insights for practical HR management.

The winner of this year's award will be selected from the submissions to the 18th Colloquium on Personnel Economics in Vienna.

The award comes along with a monetary prize of 1.000 € which will be shared among those coauthors of the paper who are not yet full professors (but papers where a coauthor is a full professor will also be considered for the prize).
